NEVADA "DRY" BY 54 VOTES

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

ACTUAL living law isn't what is merely written down in some dusty statute-book, nor is it something that men furiously fight over in the heat of an election. The one is so old, perhaps, that men have forgotten it; the other, so new that they think of it in terms of a campaign issue rather than a law.

Ethiopia Says 'No' to Peace Plan of British, French

Won't Permit "Rewarding of Italy" for Her Invasion of Ethiopia

SELASSIE "ON SPOT"

Addis Ababa Reveals Peace Plan Might Cost Emperor His Throne

By the Associated Press
Ethiopia said "No" Wednesday to the latest effort to end its East African war with Italy by negotiation. Sincerely had the peace terms agreed upon by Great Britain and France been dispatched to Addis Ababa before the emperor's minister in Paris announced that his government is unalterably opposed to any settlement of the Italo-Ethiopian war which would reward Italian aggression.

Would Unseat Selassie
ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia.—(Copy-right Associated Press)—High government officials asserted Wednesday that Emperor Haile Selassie would lose his throne if he dared accept the proposed Franco-British peace plan. The proposals, reported authoritatively to be based on an exchange of territories between Italy and Ethiopia, were described by officials as "a reward to Italy for breaking her covenants, and another device to delay further sanctions."

Emperor Lucky
WITH EMPEROR HAILE SELASSIE, Dessie, Ethiopia.—(AP)—Technical experts who examined the bombs dropped in Italian air raids at Dessie last week said Wednesday that Emperor Haile Selassie probably owed his life to the fact that many of the projectiles didn't explode.

Peace Plan Modified
WARIS, France.—(AP)—Premier Laval announced Tuesday night that a Franco-British peace plan, with both nations in perfect accord on its text, has been sent to Rome and Addis Ababa.

Laval said "minor changes" had been made in the plan at the request of the British government, but did not disclose what they were. Under the peace proposal, the following "deals" are provided: Ethiopia to get a port in Eritrea. Tigre province to be given to Italy except for the holy city of Aksum and a connecting strip of land. A large area of southeastern Ethiopia to be given to Rome. A zone of colonization to be established under Italian auspices in Ethiopia.

A treaty of administrative and financial assistance to be drawn up between Ethiopia and the League of Nations.

Diplomatic sources heard that Premier Laval, informed there was "every chance" that Mussolini will agree to negotiate for Ethiopian peace, will ask that discussion of an oil embargo against Italy be postponed at Geneva.

Christmas Parade of Giants Is to Be Held in This City

Young Business Men's Ass'n. to Sponsor It Wednesday, December 18

PRIZES ON FLOATS

Huge Comic Heads of Metropolitan Parades Will Be Shown in Hope

Hope is to have a Christmas parade this year. This announcement was made Wednesday by the Young Business Men's association, who will sponsor the event. Preliminary plans have been formulated by the committee in charge, and every effort will be made to make this one of the most outstanding parades ever held in Hope. Gigantic comic heads, five feet in diameter, will be part of the parade feature. These heads are similar to the type used in the large New York and other Eastern city parades.

Each prize awarded will be made for the finest float entered in the parade, for the best costume character and for the most unique individual entrant.

The parade will be held on Wednesday, December 18, at 3:30 p. m. Miss Beryl Henry, superintendent of schools, is making arrangements to excuse all students early enough on that day to see the parade.

J. K. Sale is chairman of the parade committee and Fred Grey, A. E. Stonequist and Terrell Cornelius are members.

The committee in charge of raising the necessary financial support for the undertaking is: R. R. Morris, chairman; Frank Ward, J. P. Duffie and C. C. Lewis.

There has got to be some compromise on the liquor question—and The Star has, ever since 1933, worked at that thankless task. We have no election flag, and get no cheers; we offer a program based on the true facts of police and economic studies, but are greeted by silence.

The governor of Arkansas, J. Marion Futrell, recommended to the legislature last spring that the state set up just such a publicly-owned system of liquor dispensaries as was advocated by John D. Rockefeller, Jr.—yet the alleged temperance forces of the state refused to consider that compromise.

The temperance forces stayed away from the legislative hearing, and the Thorne package-store law was drafted without benefit of clergy.

With the governor's recommendation already published, the temperance forces had only to speak the word and we would today have had one publicly-owned liquor store in Hope instead of six privately-owned stores.

The former would have been preferable.

But as between the latter and this total prohibition which the friends of the referendum advocate there can be no choice—regulated sale means enforcement of whatever law we do have, while prohibition means utter absence of any law at all.

Nevada Countian, Hit by Truck, Dies

Victim Believed Brother of Walter Holly, Mt. Moriah Community

PRESCOTT, Ark.—A man believed to be a brother of Walter Holly of Mt. Moriah, southern Nevada county, was struck and killed on Highway 67 seven miles north of Prescott about 6:30 p. m. Tuesday.

The body was held in a Prescott undertaking establishment Wednesday, pending positive identification.

A book found in the clothing of the man bore the name of Holly and gave his address as Mt. Moriah.

The man, aged about 55, was walking along the highway and was struck by a truck driven by a negro employee of a Prescott grocery company.

Sheriff Arlice Pittman said Wednesday that no charges had been placed against the negro, pending a further investigation of the case.

HAWAIIAN RECRUITS

Study Wind and Weather for U. S., Planning Australian Air Route

This is the last of a series of three on plans for the California-Australia sky route, the history of South Sea isles which may be stopover bases, and how modern "Crusoes" are living on these islands.

BY ERNIE PYLE

NEA Service Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON.—The three groups of young Robinson Crusoes living on the barren South Sea Islands of Baker, Jarvis, and Howland are modern Crusoes, with many conveniences at their disposal, and they know that, sooner or later, a ship will come to rescue them.

So these young Hawaiians, four on each island, go earnestly ahead with their work for science, studying wind and weather for the U. S. government. This data is being gathered for the time when airlines on regular schedules between California and Australia stop at the islands for fuel.

These boys are all between 18 and 21. They are students from the fine Kamehameha School in Honolulu. They have all the modern conveniences, sufficient physical specimens, and superior intelligence, too. They all speak English.

They were chosen after most physical examinations, for they were to be living on desert islands for a year, and the government didn't want any sickness. After their South Sea sojourn, most of them will return to school.

Cutter On Tour

Last spring a coast guard ship, loaded with supplies, and with the boys aboard, left Honolulu. William T. Miller, an old-time flyer, was in charge of the expedition, as airway superintendent of the U. S. Bureau of Air Commerce.

The cutter stayed several days at each of the three islands, supplies were taken ashore, and the boys helped to "set up housekeeping." Since then, they have been there alone, except when the cutter comes back with supplies.

One of the four boys is captain. If there are any decisions to be made, or disputes to be settled, he does it. But he doesn't have to exercise much authority, for the boys are intensely sincere, and much harder workers, they say, than our white boys.

The first thing the boys did on each island was build their little village. They had brought tents, and they set these up. On one island they found boards from an old shipwreck, and built a house. They made little streets, with little curbs along the side, out of coral rock.

Their towns are built heart-shaped, a Hawaiian custom. Everything is neat and clean.

Life on Island
The boys have an open air gymnasium, where they exercise every morning. They put on boxing gloves, and fight, light weights, made by tying bricks to each end of a stick, and tackle football dummies.

On the highest point of each island—which on the highest of the islands is only 20 feet above the water—the boys have a cone-shaped tower, like a pylon at an air race. On to this a flagstaff. But they fly the flag only when a ship comes over the horizon. No use blowing a flag to pieces when nobody can see it.

The boys have six months' food supply, and water for a year and a half. Practically all their food is canned, because fresh stuff will keep only a couple of days down there, and they have no refrigeration. A ship will visit them every four months, with new supplies.

Water is in 55 gallon steel drums. To get it ashore from the supply ships, they poured seven gallons out of each barrel, which gave it buoyancy, and then they floated it ashore.

In addition to their six months' food supply, the boys have enough hardback for many more months—just in case. Also, a part of their food and water is buried. This is in case some tramp steamer, out of supplies, would come along and take their food away from them.

It could happen. There are only four of them, you know. Only the other day, the boys on Jarvis saw a tramp. It came up from the south, and went west. It flew no flag and did not answer their warnings.

The lads have a large chest of first aid stuff, and one of each group knows considerably more than just the first principles of treatment. There (Continued on page three)

2 Held Here for Texas Auto Theft

Men Deny It, But Texans Will Come Here to Look at Accused Pair

Chief of Police John W. Ridgill said Wednesday that he is holding two men in jail here booked as Marion and Melborn McGlothum, brothers, on charges of automobile theft. The two men were arrested Tuesday night as they rode into Hope in a Pontiac coupe. The car is believed to be the property of Jerome McLester, of Coleman, Texas.

Chief Ridgill said Coleman officers had telephoned here to hold the men. Texas authorities are expected to arrive in Hope Thursday.

The two men under arrest gave Coleman as their address, but denied they had stolen the car.

The gate keeper at the Fulton toll bridge became suspicious of the two men when they passed over the bridge Tuesday night and telephoned local officers to make an investigation when the car arrived in Hope.

The two men were arrested by Officers Baker, Ward and Stuart.

Red River Threat Believed Averted

Rate of Rise Slackens, Stream Standing Only 23.6 Wednesday

Red river at 7 o'clock Wednesday morning stood at 23.6 feet, a rise of only four-tenths of a foot since Tuesday, and old-timers don't believe the stream will go to the predicted 28-foot stage. Ben Wilson, The Star's Fulton correspondent, reported Wednesday morning.

Drift is still running heavy, and crews on both the highway and Missouri Pacific railroad bridges are busy pulling it away from the piers of the big structures.

City of Prescott Votes Dry by 33-Vote Margin in County Referendum

HALF LIST VOTING

Total of 1,904 Poll Tax Receipts in Nevada County This Year

By LEONARD ELLIS
Staff Writer, The Star

PRESCOTT, Ark.—Unofficial returns from 19 complete precincts out of 21 in Nevada county at 2 p. m. Wednesday gave prohibition forces a 54-vote lead in Tuesday's local option liquor election.

Prohibition forces here predicted that the votes from the two missing boxes, Union Church and Leake township, would not change the results.

The tabulation of the vote against liquor sales was 463; for liquor sales 409.

The city of Prescott gave the dry supporters a 33-vote margin. Out of approximately 800 poll tax receipts issued to citizens living in Prescott about half were used.

The Emmet Township, for liquor 13; against 47.

At Falcon the vote was: For liquor 41; against 1.

Waterloo helped the wet cause by voting 36-to-1 in favor of liquor sales. Prescott has two liquor stores; the only ones in the county.

Of 1,904 poll tax receipts issued in Nevada county about half were used in the vote Tuesday. The maximum voting strength of the county, taken from figures four years ago, is 1,904.

There are 11 absentee ballots to be tabulated at the official canvass. Pick up—Tabulation.

Tenant's Share of Benefits Increased

Terms of 4-Year Cotton Contract Explained by County Agent

The new four-year cotton contract announced last week by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration provides for a more equitable division of the adjustment payments between landlords and tenants, and for a further reduction in 1936 of one million acres under the 1935 national allotment, Frank R. Stanley, county agent, points out.

Adjustment payments will be made in one check, and will amount to 5 cents per pound, which is about the same as in the 1935 program. This single adjustment payment will take the place of the two rental installment payments and the parity payment under the 1934 and 1935 programs.

The single adjustment payment will be divided between landlord and tenants on a basis which represents an effort on the part of the Triple A officials to evaluate fairly the factors of land, teams, equipment, and labor in the making of the crop, Mr. Stanley

The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Proteins in Milk and Eggs Are Best for Invalids, Growing Children

There are at least two fundamental kinds of proteins. They vary in the extent to which they are used by the body for growth and for repair of tissue.

The proteins of some foods, for example, are more nutritious than those in other foods, because they more nearly approximate the requirements of the human body. The proteins in milk are better for us than those in cereals, but when milk and cereals are fed together, the proteins in both of these food substances supplement each other.

It is important to know about these differences in proteins, because certain foods cost much more than others, and some are more difficult to get than others. Moreover, a person who is ill may need protein foods that are easier to assimilate and use in his body than are required by a person who is well.

The mother who is nursing a baby or who is going to give birth to a child, the person who is getting well after a long period of illness, the person with tuberculosis who finds it difficult to get up an appetite for of the crime) bursts into his apartment and gets into the tub with him while he is having a shower; and although he is not exactly like any newspaper photographer I have ever met, he is a plausible character and the plot which Mr. Cox has provided is ingenious and properly baffling. All in all, you'll find "Murder With Pictures" well worth your while.

Your Children

By Olive Roberts Barton

This year the toy discoverers have gone one step further, just when we thought the last word in playings had been uttered.

We now have not only the constructive play set, the one that keeps the child busy and interested, but the "work" set.

After all it isn't much fun making things to be knocked down the next minute. A boy or girl likes to make permanent things. Affairs that remain to show their industry.

Behind the weaving frame and the bead rack. On the weaving frame with its bright yarns can be made small rugs or mats. Patterns are suggested that help the child with stripes or simple figures. In time she (or he) will be able to improvise and it is surprising how they learn.

Bead racks are fascinating for the girl. It seems to be ingrained in us women to love beads and work with them, whether the results are called "jewelry" or not. However the things I have seen turned out have been useful as well as ornamental.

With some of the carpenter sets now come simple blue prints for construction, and even planned boards to be nailed together. The boxes of balsa wood and paper for building airplanes that "fly" have reached the point of miniature perfection.

Back to the girls again; there are sewing layouts, patterns and all, that are as complete as the work room of the professional seamstress.

Then there are the "hobby" gifts. The paraphernalia for insect collections. Photographic sets with developers and all. Stamp albums. Typewriters with instructions for use and care. The makings of a radio. Chemistry equipment for safe experiment. Naturally the hobby boxes fall right in line with birds, trees, flowers, fishing, camping and all the rest of it make excellent gifts for the child over ten. I recommend these thoroughly as a means of education anyway. They should be those especially written for children as the too technical volume may confuse them and lack interest.

Teens Still Like Toys

Naturally we cannot emphasize the "work" or "educational" idea too strongly for Christmas for after all bigger children are still little children at heart and the pure "fun" toy must not be left out. Christmas is a time to be all-time foolish, and no twelve-year-old will be insulted if presented with a play band that winds with a key or a clown that dances to the vibrations of the radio. It is well to train his talents but also necessary not to make him feel too grown-up. I think sometimes that we overlook this side of children at Christmas. It is one day they want to be young. Actually boys and girls of twelve don't want to grow up. They are real Peter Pans at heart.

So, although microscopes, musical instruments, compasses and printing sets are grand things, I would, if I were doing it, mix a little sugar in the bread and put in some raisins.

Glorifying Yourself

By Alicia Hart

"Beautiful arms are symmetrically rounded, as full, but not muscular," says David Loomis, trainer of Hollywood stars. "There's not much a woman can do to improve the shape of her hands (however, gripping exercises tend to enlarge them), but if she plans her exercises carefully it is quite possible to develop scrawny arms or to reduce fat ones."

"A thin arm can be made round and smooth and graceful by exercises that are vigorous and concentrated. The idea is to draw a lot of blood to this portion of the anatomy, to exhaust the muscles as quickly as possible, then to relax and give them plenty of time to rest."

"On the other hand, repetitious exercises, stretched over long periods of time will tear down fatty tissues. In other words, such exercises burn up fat without developing muscle. For instance, a long distance runner who

Schmeling Signs for Louis Fight

German to Meet Negro in New York Bout Some Time Next June

NEW YORK—Deciding that gold was preferable to glory, Max Schmeling signed Tuesday to fight Joe Louis here in June. The German would have preferred to have met Champion Jimmy Braddock, but when the Boxing Commission nixed this suggestion, Max agreed to take on Louis.

Schmeling had asked that Louis be sidetracked while he tried to strip Braddock of his title; which he would then take back to Berlin and put in cold storage until he grew a long grey beard.

Louis is the No. 1 challenger, it was explained to Max. If he was really serious in his efforts to regain the championship he won from Jack Sharkey, he must remove Louis. Only by blasting Joe out of the picture could he hope for anything more than a social meeting with the Jersey Irishman.

Max hustled up to Mike Jacobs' office and signed a set of documents. Louis already had signed. Jacobs predicted that Schmeling and Louis will draw $1,500,000 at the Yankee stadium.

Schmeling expressed only one fear. He hoped nothing would happen to hurt Louis' drawing power during the next six months. Max will watch Joe closely when he meets Uzdun in the Garden Friday night. He hopes that Louis will have no difficulties with Izzy Gastanaga in Havana on December 29 and that he will not lend with his chin against Charlie Ritzlaff in Chicago on January 13.

Joe along for great distances is thin. Even a sprinter, who puts everything into a short dash, then rests, is big and muscular.

"A good exercise to develop thin arms is done with a bar bell or some other kind of heavy weight. Lift it up and down over the head ten times twice a day for two weeks. Then increase the number of lifts to eighteen."

"To reduce fat arms, use free arm exercises with no weights. Swing your arms in circles, moving back and forth, in and out rapidly, with many repetitions."

The largest cave temple in India is at Karli, a village in the Poona district. It contains a great hall 126 feet long, 45 feet wide and 46 feet high, and its carving dates from the first century B. C.

Ethiopia Says 'No'

Ethiopian government said Tuesday that Italians are retreating from their main front lines in the Makale region following successes by the African defenders.

Two victories by the armies of Ras Seyoum, former governor of Tigray province, were reported in the northern area last week.

An official statement said Seyoum's warriors scattered Italian advance companies at Kallabade December 2 and at Menggaya the following day. Nine Italians were left dead, it was said, and a number of rifles were captured.

"Fifth soldiers from the personal bodyguard of the traitor Haile Selassie Gussa (son-in-law of the emperor) joined the Ethiopian side December 8," the government added.

"The Italians seized all cattle in a big round-up north of Makale December 7, without indemnifying the population."

Railroad President Merely Listened

Baldwin Tells Court It Was VanSweringen Who Ran the Road

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(AP)—L. W. Baldwin, president and co-trustee of the Missouri Pacific railroad, testified Tuesday that O. F. Van Sweringen was telling him what to do, not asking him, at the time of financial operations now being investigated in federal court.

Baldwin, chief witness before Master Marion C. Early, investigating deals whereby $3,438,000 of Missouri Pacific funds were used to buy its own bonds and shares, said he confined his activities to the operating phase of the road after the Van Sweringens took control in 1930.

Baldwin said he did not know of large cash advances made by Missouri Pacific to a subsidiary for use of Van Sweringens in connection with the plan until after everything was finished. Tuesday's hearing, a continuation of an inquiry begun at Cleveland last month, was based upon recommendations to a federal court by Fred L. Williams, special lawyer for the trustees, that the trustees take action to recover from the Van Sweringens "heavy losses" which allegedly resulted

Livestock Men to Hold State Meet

C. G. Randall to Be Government Speaker at Little Rock Friday

The second annual meeting of the Arkansas Cattlemen's association will be held in Little Rock, Friday, according to Frank R. Stanley, county agent, who is urging cattlemen of Hempstead county to take advantage of this opportunity to discuss problems of common interest with leaders of the industry in Arkansas.

The chief speaker on the program will be C. G. Randall of Washington, D. C., who is in charge of the livestock and wool section of the Farm Credit Administration. Mr. Randall will discuss livestock marketing. The beef cattle outlook for 1936 will be given by E. D. White, extension economist in marketing, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

Hereford, Angus and Shorthorn breeding in Arkansas will be discussed by J. E. Folker of Rogers, L. A. Sloan of Imboden, and Harold Roberts of Fayetteville. An open discussion on controlling the stealing of livestock will be led by L. A. Dillahunty, Sevier county; L. S. Finch, Perry county; and Floyd Hester, Saline county.

E. M. Faber, England, Ark., president of the association, will preside at the meeting, which will be held at the Marion Hotel.

A large number of producers from all over the state is expected to attend the meeting Mr. Stanley stated.

ed from the financial operations in question.

Baldwin insisted that he did not question the financial activities of the Van Sweringens.

Four other directors or former directors of the Missouri-Pacific testified they did not know of the share and bond purchases until they saw an audit of the transactions in November, 1934. They were John C. Leonard, St. Louis; John R. Flippin, Memphis; William T. Kemper, Kansas City financier, and W. W. Reilly, Buffalo, N. Y.

The foremost aims and ideals of the local club are to promote each succeeding year of club work with greater success than that of the preceding year.

Chandler Becomes Kentucky Governor

Will Carry Out His Pledge to Repeal the State's Sales Tax

FRANKFORT, Ky.—(AP)—A. B. (Happy) Chandler, 37-year-old veteran of some of Kentucky's bitterest political campaigns, became governor Tuesday.

After Chief Justice William Rogers Clay, Chandler repeated Kentucky's ancient oath of office, pledging fealty to the United States and Kentucky constitutions. He affirmed that he had not, while a Kentucky citizen, fought a duel, sent, accepted, carried a challenge, acted as a second or abetted any one else to do so. These sections were placed in the official oath at a time when Kentucky statesmen appealed to pistols issues not satisfactorily decided at the polls.

Governor Chandler promised in his inaugural address to carry out his campaign promises, chief among which was one to undo the work of his predecessor, Gov. Ruby Laffoon, by repealing the state 3 per cent sales tax.

"Unless those in arrears come in on pay or see some member of my staff and make proper arrangements for settlement of taxes their property will be subject to seizure," the sheriff warned.

The total assessed valuation of personal property in Nevada county is $175,342. A great many persons are in arrears for 1934 taxes and for personal taxes dating a few years back, the sheriff said.

"Unless these taxes are paid we will be forced to levy on property to collect. Payment of these taxes is a necessity, and government operations depend upon it to exist," the sheriff said.

He pointed out that it was a hard matter to get the farmer to walk into his office and pay personal taxes when the farmer knows that persons living in the city are delinquent.

Unless collections pick up, deputies will be sent out to make a canvass of the county, Sheriff Pittman concluded.

"Tips" Newspaper, Then Fires Pistol

George Olvany, Jr., Wounds Self Critically in Suicide Attempt

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y.—(AP)—George Olvany Jr., young son of a former Tammany Hall political leader, tipped a reporter on a news story Tuesday, then dramatically made the story, apparently by shooting himself through the head. His condition was critical.

The tip was contained in a note handed to Bruce Clark, a newspaperman friend.

Olvany was to return to New York for the Christmas holidays. He has been a convalescent at Saranac Lake since his graduation from Brown University in June.

An emergency operation and a blood transfusion were resorted to in efforts to save young Olvany's life, but the hospital superintendent held out no hope.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

After the death of her parents, lovely DANA WESTBROOK comes to live with her aunt, Mrs. LIAH CAMERON.

Dana's aunt, Mrs. LIAH CAMERON, is a widow with two children. Dana's grandmother plans for her young granddaughter to marry rich. Mrs. LIAH CAMERON, Dana's aunt, has become attracted to DR. SCOTT STANLEY.

Nancy, who makes her love to Dana, is a girl with a very different attitude. Unhappily watches the progress of the romance between Dana and Ronald. Just as unexpectedly, PAULIA LONG watches Scott Stanley's interest in Dana increase.

Ronald becomes jealous of Scott and stays away from Dana. Mrs. Cameron asks Scott to stop visiting Dana, but they meet at a dance and recklessly decide to marry. Mrs. Cameron predicts that the marriage will not last.

Thinking he is planning Dana, Scott rents the small cottage to live in. Dana, however, hides her disappointment.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIX

DANA looked up at Scott. "We're going to be happy here," she told him.

"You've got the tense wrong, honey," he replied. "We are happy. Now I must dash, Dana. Do you think you can find something to keep you busy for a while?"

"With all that unpacking to do!" "I'll bring the traveling bags up."

After Scott had gone Dana set to work, her enthusiasm mounting. The kitchen was not gloomy. It was bright. The sun was pouring in at the window, and an extra brightness was achieved by light walls. The gas stove, like everything else, was new.

"I'll get some of that pretty enameled ware down town, probably green," Dana mused. It was going to be fun shopping to equip her kitchen.

"I always wanted to be turned loose on a buying orgy in a five-and-ten. And here I am," Dana smiled to herself, thinking of the bills Scott had tucked into her purse on the drive in from the country.

He had said she'd probably need a little change to start house-keeping. They had been rather large bills. Dana had discovered—much larger than he could afford to hand out carelessly like that.

"I'll show him how long money can last," she thought.

The packing didn't require much time, and, with her tour of inspection completed, Dana was lonely. "I'll do some of that shopping now," she decided impulsively. "I'll take a street car and have the packages sent out."

Shopping was all she had anticipated. Clerks entered enthusiastically into her mood as she selected kitchen spoons, sifter, measuring cups, pans, baking dishes. It was surprising how much one small apartment kitchen could require.

There was a big hole in one of the larger bills, but Dana told herself such purchases lasted for years and years. So many of the articles seemed essential to prepare the evening meal. She decided to take some of them with her and then have groceries sent out. Scott would be surprised to find dinner ready the first night in their new home.

DANA came out of the store with her arms loaded, and almost bumped into Ronnie. "The bride herself!" Ronnie exclaimed. His face flushed, but his tone was cordial. "Let me carry that package to your car," he offered.

Dana read his amazement. She must look extremely unbridled, wearing an old dress she had put on that morning in the country. Her hand went up, mechanically, to tuck a wisp of hair in place.

"I came on the street car," Dana said.

Ronnie made no attempt to hide his amazement. "All the way from Magnolia street on the street car?" His tone implied, "What was Scott doing while you rode the street car?"

Dana was sure that was what Ronnie was thinking. Mentally, she hotly defended Scott. Scott was a doctor, with patients to think of. Where would a doctor be without his car? And Ronnie was only a rich boy with nothing to do but drive about and amuse himself.

"We aren't on Magnolia," Dana explained. "We're close in, in an apartment."

"I'll drive you home," Ronnie said shortly. "You can't carry that big package around on a street car."

Dana relinquished the package with a sigh of relief. She had been foolish to try to bring things home, making herself look ridiculous to her friends. . . well, to Ronnie.

It was nice, too, to sit luxuriously in the low seat of Ronnie's roadster. As she did she noticed a girl in another car, waiting to pull into the space they were leaving. Paula Long! Paula, her face white and drawn, looking ill. Their glances met. Paula was staring at Dana with a strange intensity that somehow made the other girl feel cold inside. Then Paula smiled and nodded cheerfully.

Ronnie said, dryly: "You probably know that Paula isn't feeling any too kindly toward you right now."

Dana said slowly, "I'd hate to have her dislike me."

"So would I!" Ronnie said, with a different inflection.

PAULIA was ill. Ever since she had heard the news of Scott's marriage life had become meaningless, something merely to be endured.

For years Scott had been the one person Paula really cared about. Their friendship had begun in high school. Scott, with his flashing, comprehensive mind, and the quick-witted, humorous Paula had found much in common. Then she had gone away to school and he had entered college.

When Scott was deep in his second year of medical training Paula had taken an apartment in the same city, ostensibly for the purpose of studying art. She had managed to crowd in quite a bit of "seeing Scott" between sketching expeditions. Later, when he was interning, she had found it important to be in New York. All this had been so cleverly and subtly managed he had never dreamed that the friendship that had budded under high school walls had long since blossomed for Paula into an abiding and devastating passion.

The morning after Scott's marriage Paula received a telephone call. She was lying in bed—a lacy froth of pillows at her back, her vivid red hair loosened and falling in shoulder length about her thin, interesting face.

Charlotte, the elderly housekeeper, answered the call. "Tell them to ring back later, Carla," Paula said, calling the woman who had been maid and mother to her by the name she had given her as a small child.

Charlotte turned, with a hand over the mouthpiece: "It's Miss Dorothy. She says it's important—something about Mr. Scott."

Paula reached for the phone quickly.

DOROTHY NORTON'S voice came to her, amazed: "I knew that would bring you. Weren't you surprised? We all were. I tried to talk to you last night but your phone was down."

"I had one of those horrible headaches," Paula said. Her voice was laden, with a premonition of what was to come. "What are you talking about, anyway?"

"Surely, you know about Scott's marriage."

Scott's marriage. . . Scott's marriage. The words burned into her brain.

"No," said Paula dully. "You haven't seen the papers? It was in last night's final edition."

"I hadn't heard."

"Gracious, I'm sorry to break the bad news! I had no idea—"

Paula had mustered her reserves. She managed a laugh. "So Scott's taken the leap! That's like him. Of course it's Dana—and she's getting a prince. But then he's lucky, too—"

Unerring intuition prompted her. It seemed to Paula that she had always known this was coming. Ever since the day she had seen Dana with her strangely beautiful blue-green eyes looking down at Scott.

"How they kept it so quiet is a mystery," Dorothy rattled on. "Coming on the heels of that perfectly desperate affair with Ronnie, nobody can understand it. Dana's been seeing lots of Scott lately, but it was nothing to the way Ronnie has been mooning over her."

"The only thing I can't forgive is their not inviting me to the wedding," Paula said. Her hand, clenching the phone was white to the knuckles. "For goodness sake, Dot, get the idea out of your head that I've ever felt romantic about Scott! You should know me well enough to understand that I'm wedded to a pencil and a paint brush."

Dot hung up, smiling. It had been thrilling to break the news to old Paula, who had it coming to her. Following Scott around with her pretense of "pure friendship" as she had. Succeeding in pulling the wool over her eyes, but never for a moment fooling anyone else.

Paula turned from the phone, a wild and fierce light in her eyes. (To Be Continued)

Black vines cling to the wall—
Ah, I remember
The winter follows the fall,
And all things die in December.

Chilling the rose and the runc,
Slaying all things in its track—
But this I'd forgotten in June.

The Friday Choral club under the direction of Mrs. John Wellborn will present its annual Christmas Candle Light Vesper service at 5:30 Sunday evening at the First Methodist church. The program will consist of excerpts from the Messiah, a violin number by Miss Helen McRae, bass solo by Talbot Field, organ groups by Mrs. Ralph Taul and Mrs. B. C. Hyatt with piano accompaniments by Mrs. Edwin Stewart. All the churches in the city are uniting in observance of this service.

Friends will be glad to know of the improvement of Mrs. Edwin Dossotti, who has been ill for the past week at his home on North street.

The new officers elected for the coming year's work in the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist church were as follows: President, Mrs. Frank M. Stanley; vice president, Mrs. O. A. Graves; recording secretary, Mrs. Minor Gordon; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. M. LaCrosse; conference treasurer, Mrs. T. R. Billingsley; local treasurer, Mrs. A. M. Saunders; superintendent of Christian relations, Miss Dell McClanahan; superintendent of mission study, Mrs. C. D. Lester; superintendent of supplies, Mrs. O. L. Reed; superintendent of local work, Miss Mamie Brant; chairman of memorials, Mrs. Frank Miller; chairman for World Outlook, Mrs. Glen Williams; music chairman, Mrs. Edwin Stewart; publicity chairman, Mrs. L. W. Young.

The Junior-Senior High P. T. A. will meet at 3:30 Thursday afternoon at the high school. This being the final meeting of the year, the president urges a full attendance.

Mrs. Oliver Williams was a Wednesday visitor in Little Rock.

The Friday Music club will meet Friday afternoon at the home of Miss Havelock Story, West Second street, with Miss Mary Louise Keith as joint hostess. The Choral club will meet promptly at 2 o'clock, followed by the program at 3 o'clock.

Mrs. Ralph Roulton will present her Christmas recital on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at her residence on North Pine street. Friends of the club and those interested in this work are invited. This is an annual affair of Mrs. Roulton's with the Christmas decorations and suggestions adding no small part to the occasion.

Among the out-of-town relatives and friends attending the funeral services held for the late Mrs. J. W. Anderson from the J. M. Houston home in this city on Wednesday morning were Mrs. K. G. Anderson and daughter, Mary Lee of Athens, Texas; Mrs. Grover McEochin, Mrs. C. C. Taul and Miss Mary Elizabeth Taul of Little Rock.

"Musketeers" at Saenger Thursday

Famed Romantic Story Again Put on Screen, This Time in Sound

Elaborately mounted, but with its rich costumes, settings and spectacle never allowed to interfere with the forceful directness of the great Dumas tale of "The Three Musketeers" comes Thursday and Friday to the Saenger.

For the first time the immortal swashbucklers, d'Artagnan and his comrades in arms, come to the screen with sound to create complete realism. Brilliantly enacted, faithfully adapted, and directed with spirit, the classic of 17th Century intrigue realizes the full romantic flavor of the widely familiar novel.

Swiftly paced, the picture drives to its exciting climaxes with verve, suspense and emotional punch, its most blistering episodes graced with lusty comedy, and its quieter moods with sentimental charm. Without slighting any of its colorful characters, the story has been kept paramount. Performances are skillfully proportioned to emphasize the conflict of wit and blade, love and blunders which decides the issue between the queen of France and Cardinal Richelieu for domination of the King, and the reckless devotion of the four fighting cavaliers who pledged their lives with the famous slogan, "All for one, one for all."

said. The status of each individual who has a share in the crop is clearly defined, and much of the confusion and misunderstanding involved in the settlement of claims under the two previous programs will be avoided.

The person who owns the land will receive 37 1/2 per cent; the person who provides the work stock and equipment will receive 12 1/2 per cent; and the remaining 50 per cent will be divided between landlord and tenant in the same proportion as is the crop.

Using a farm with an adjustment payment of $100 as an example, Mr. Stanley explains that the division between landlord and share-cropper in 1935 will be $75 to the landlord and $25 to the share-cropper, while in 1935 the landlord's share was $85 and the share-cropper's $15. The nonmanning share tenant's and the landlord's portions of the payments under the 1935 contract will each be $50; under the 1935 contract, the landlord received $77.50 and the tenant $22.50. The nonmanning share tenant will receive $50 and the landlord $50 in 1936, while in 1935 such a tenant received $37.50 and the landlord $42.50.

A contract signer may secure release from his contract at the end of any year by giving notice that he wishes to do so before December 1 of that year, Mr. Stanley stated. Also, the Secretary of Agriculture may suspend or terminate all contracts at the end of any year by giving notice to all producers of his intention by November 15 of that year.

Amateur Show Is Free at Fair Park

Five Matches on Mauldin's Athletic Program Here Wednesday

Amateur boxers and wrestlers of Hope and Hempstead county will have an opportunity Wednesday night to demonstrate their talent in a scheduled all-amateur show at Fair Park. The program will be free. The public is invited.

Five matches have been carded. The feature event will be a wrestling match between Bert Mauldin and Carl Woodruff. The bout is scheduled for two out of three falls. Last week Mauldin and Woodruff put on a good show, battling 20 minutes to a draw.

Plans were under way for a possible sixth match, which would include Nathan Logan, negro brickyard mauler, who last week won a knockout over Battling Siki, Hope negro.

Logan is anxious to fight but no opponent had been found Wednesday morning. Promoter Mauldin said that Logan would appear in the show if a worthy opponent could be found.

Due to lack of sufficient training, only a small percentage of athletes enrolled in the amateur club, will see action Wednesday night.

More than two dozen athletes have been working out each night for the past week under instructor A1 (Dusty) Rhodes, former professional grappler.

A number of these prospective fighters have not had enough experience to get in shape for a public appearance. Promoter Mauldin said by next week he hoped to have eight or 10 matches.

Due to the free show and indications that Hope fans desire amateur performances, a large crowd is expected. The arena has a seating capacity of 500 or more. Hostess were turned on Wednesday noon to warm up the building. The show starts at 8 p. m.

Young Crusoes On

has been no sickness, or serious injury, among them so far.

Dawn in South Seas

What is the routine on these three lonely islands? Well, there's plenty of work to do.

All the youths are up at dawn, and away in the South Seas is where they get up to see. The boys do their gym exercises, and then eat breakfast.

It takes all of one boy's time to cook and wash dishes and keep the town clean. They take turns, each cooking for a week.

Then, one boy is always on "watch," as on a ship at sea, recording the readings of the weather instruments, and writing up the day's log. Every hour of the day he has to put down the temperature, speed and direction of the wind, barometer reading, describe the clouds, and so on.

At night, it is done once every three hours. The boys take weekly turns at being weather man, too.

The two not cooking or on watch are building an airport. They are clearing off weeds and leveling a wide strip each way across the island, to make a possible landing field for land planes.

What will land planes ever be doing down there, a thousand miles from anywhere? Well, in the future we may be flying land planes across the ocean, land planes that will go faster than flying boats, and that would float as long as a boat.

Sport Is Fishing

In the heat of midday, the boys rest on their cots under their tents. In midafternoon, they start work again.

In the evening comes a Hawaiian's real fun. The Crusoes make for the beach, to spear fish.

They are very good at it. If their supplies ever gave out, they could live on fish indefinitely. The tropical fish are so plentiful they can even take their pick in color.

But they must be careful. The reefs are infested with vicious sharks. They won't attack a brown-skinned Hawaiian as quickly as they will a white man, but they'll attack if you give them a chance.

Once in a while, the boys catch a turtle on the beach, and then they have a feast. Unless you find one asleep, he gets away before you can flip him on his back. They are big turtles, big as an ordinary office desk.

The boys have plenty of fresh eggs. The islands are alive with birds, booby birds and frigate birds. They lay thousands of eggs a day.

And here's a funny thing about those birds. Each one will set only on its egg. In the evening, arguable cloud of birds, thousands of them, will come winging in from the ocean, and everyone will pick out his (probably her) special egg and come down to it. How they can tell, nobody knows.

The boys will be alone over the holidays. The next ship due to visit them will arrive in January, but January is the heavy surf season, and the ship may have to lie off the reef for a week before it can send a boat through.

Yes, America is in earnest about that airline to Australia. The government isn't going to all this trouble and expense just for fun.

Miller has been back in Washington for six weeks or so. But he seems to be hurrying around these days, as if he were getting ready to go somewhere.

If you want to send him a Christmas present, you'd better get out your South Sea postal directory.

THE END.

Hope Woman Gets Centennial Honor

Mary Katherine Sloan Widow of Texas Military Hero, "Jack" Berry

PUTNAM, Texas.—The 82-year-old widow of A. J. "Jack" Berry, and a native of Hope, Arkansas, is the surviving wife of a hero of the Battle of San Jacinto.

Mrs. Berry is very active for her years and likes a keen interest in current events—especially the present plans that are being made in preparation for Texas' 100th anniversary observance, which will be marked in 1936 with the Texas Centennial Celebrations.

Mrs. Berry, whose maiden name was Mary Katherine Sloan, was born near Hope, Ark., August 29, 1853. She came to Texas with her parents when two years of age. At the age of 18 she visited friends in Williamson county and it was there she met "Jack" Berry. Mrs. Berry became a widow when Captain Berry died July 31, 1899, having served in the battle of San Jacinto, the historic encounter which resulted in a victory for the Texans and marked the independence of the Lone Star State.

A marker at the grave of Captain Berry in Callahan county, and placed there by the Texas Centennial Commission, will serve to remind Texans and visitors to Texas of the heroism of one who gave his life to the cause of Texas independence.

EGAD, HINKY—MR. TOPPIN, OF THE CORNER DEPARTMENT STORE, OFFERED ME A POSITION, FOR THE NEXT TWO WEEKS, WRAPPING CHRISTMAS PACKAGES—BUT I MUST DECLINE, OWING TO A TOUCH OF ARTHRITIS IN MY FINGERS—WHICH MUST BE NIMBLE FOR PACKAGE WRAPPING! TELL MR. TOPPIN I SENT YOU, AND HELL BE GLAD TO GIVE YOU THE JOB!

THANKS, MAJOR—BUT I'M AFRAID I'D LIKE TH' JOB—AN' THERE I'D BE-KNOWIN' IT WOULD ONLY LAST FOR TWO WEEKS!

OK, LISSSEN, PROFESSOR—CMERE, WILLYA?

MESBEE YOU CAN HELP ME OUT! YSEE, IT'S GETTIN' NEAR CHRISTMAS, AN' TH' FELLAS WILL BE GETTIN' ME PRESENTS, NALL—AN' I WANNA HEAD 'EM OFF FROM SPENDIN' A LOT OF MONEY SEE F'IT JUS' DOESN'T SEEM RIGHT T'ACCEPT EXPENSIVE GIFTS, WHEN I KNOW THEY'RE HARD UP

DO YOU THINK IT'D BE ALL RIGHT IF I'D SUGGEST SOMETHING OH, LIKE A SMALL INEXPENSIVE PERFUME BOTTLE?

OF COURSE! ONLY—DON'T YOU THINK THAT MIGHT POSSIBLY BE TAKEN AS A HINT THAT YOU'D LIKE TO HAVE IT FILLED WITH YOUR FAVORITE AROMA BEFORE DELIVERY?

SURE! BUT, I'D JUS' LEAVE THAT UP TO THEM.

ALLEY OOP

Poor Yoriks!—They Knew 'Em Well

WHASSA MATTER, OOP? WHAD'YA SEE?

SHHH—CMUP HERE AN' LOOK!

GREAT GIDDLY GOOSH!

DOOTSY BOBO AN' KING TUNK HAVE DONE BEEN ET UP BY A DINOSAUR!

WOTTA NAWFUL END! BRRR.

OH, WELL, WE CAN'T DO NO GOOD HERE—LES GIT GOIN'

YEAH, I RECKON WED BETTER.

GRR-RRA!

Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here!

OBOY! HAPPY DAY! WE'RE SAVED.

LULU BELLE, AND THE WHOLE GANG SCOME ROWING ASHORE.

HEY, YOU LOP-EARED SO-AN-SOS, DID YE GIT THE MURDERER?

YOU BETCHA LIFE, WE DID!

SURE ENOUGH, IT'S THE GOOD SHIP, MANYAHHA THAT ANCHORS NEAR BY.

FRECKLES AND HIS FRIENDS

HE'S SLIP'RY BIGGER.

WOT! SLIPPERY BIGGER, ALIVE?

DID HE CONFESS?

WELL, WOTTA Y'KNOW ABOUT THAT?

AW, I SUSPECTA HEEM ALA DA TAM.

QUICK, BUDDIE, TAKE ME TO THE SHIP. I GOT TO SEND A RADIO MESSAGE.

IF A GUY STARVES WHEN HE HAS GOLD BURIED IN HIS YARD, HE MUST BE A BIT BALMY! BUT LET'S HELP HIM, IF WE CAN!!

IF WE GIVE HIM FOOD, IT WON'T DO HIM MUCH GOOD, IF HE BURIES IT... BUT, CHANCES ARE HE WON'T... HE LOOKS TOO HUNGRY FOR THAT!!

OUR ORIGINAL PLAN WAS TO MAKE EVERYONE IN SHADYSIDE HAPPY ON CHRISTMAS... OKAY, WE'LL START WITH HIM... HE'S OUR TOUGHEST PROBLEM!!

A LOT OF CAST-OFF CLOTHES WE COLLECTED WERE SOLD AN' TURNED INTO GROCERIES... HERE THEY ARE!

ALL RIGHT, NOW LET'S TURN A LOT OF GROCERIES INTO AN OLD MAN!!

I BET IT'S BEEN AGES SINCE THAT POOR OLD GUY HAS EATEN THE CORNERS OFF A SQUARE MEAL!!

HE MAY LEAD A HAND-TO-MOUTH EXISTENCE, BUT FROM THE LOOKS OF HIM, I THINK HIS HAND HAS LOST ITS WAY!!
